Portugal, on the numbers.

Why invest in Portugal?

Because Portugal recorded the strongest residential price growth in the European Union in 2025, and it is not a one-off spike. It continues a decade of steady appreciation, driven by a lasting housing shortage, constant international demand and stable economic fundamentals.

How strong is the economy behind the market?

Strong, and steady. In 2025 The Economist named Portugal its Economy of the Year, first among 36 advanced economies. GDP grew 1.9%, above the EU average. Unemployment fell to a historic low of 5.8%, the budget ran a surplus and the credit rating was upgraded to A+. It is this stable, growing economy that supports the property market — not sentiment, and not a single good year.

WHERE THE OPPORTUNITY LIES

Where is the opportunity now?

Lisbon's average new-build price is around €8,520 per square metre in 2025 — still 30 to 40% below the same space in London or Paris, even as the city keeps getting stronger. That gap is part of what continues to attract international capital.

The sharpest growth is not in the established prime districts. It is in emerging areas such as Beato and Marvila, former industrial neighbourhoods on the eastern riverfront that now attract steady investment in tech, creative industries and hospitality. Values there rose 25% to 32% in 2025 alone, well ahead of the national average.

What does a purchase cost, and how does it run?

On top of the price, a Portuguese purchase carries the one-off costs below. Before you commit, we prepare a breakdown for your specific property, item by item — no figure in it is a placeholder.

COST ITEM	TYPICAL LEVEL
IMT, property transfer tax	Progressive, up to ~7.5%
Stamp duty	0.8% of price
Notary and land registry	≈ €1,000 to €1,500
Legal fees, conveyancing	≈ 1%, or fixed
Annual property tax (IMI), ongoing	0.3% to 0.45% p.a.

Illustrative. IMT is progressive and depends on the price and on whether the property is a primary or a secondary home. Non-residents may need fiscal representation.

THE TRANSACTION

How does the purchase process work?

01 Investment brief
We agree your objective, budget and timeline, then return a short list of vetted opportunities that match, usually within days.

02 Checks and due diligence
Legal standing, ownership and title are verified before any money moves, so you commit with a clear view of the risk.

03 Promissory contract, CPCV
Terms are agreed and a deposit secures the property, usually two to four weeks after an offer is accepted.

04 Completion
The final deed and registration follow, typically four to eight weeks later depending on financing. The property is then legally yours.

05 Asset management
For owners living abroad, we manage the property on an ongoing basis, protecting the investment from day one.

Timelines are typical, not guaranteed, and depend on financing, the counterparty and the specific property. Figures current as of July 2026 and subject to change.

Do strong market numbers mean a good investment?

Not on their own. The return depends on the property, the location, the structure and the management. That is where we come in, before, during and after the purchase. We are an independent advisory firm, not tied to any developer, so our recommendations are based on what performs for you.

Define the objective	Yield, capital growth, a base for residency, or a mix. Each one points to a different property and a different location.
Select property and location	From established prime districts to fast-growing areas such as Beato and Marvila, matched to your objective and your appetite for risk.
Check and verify	Legal standing, clear ownership, condition and realistic net returns, all set out before you commit.
Structure it correctly	Ownership, tax and financing arranged around your situation, and residency where that is part of the plan.
Manage for the long term	Tenants, maintenance and reporting handled on your behalf, so owning from abroad stays genuinely hands-off.
