

Portugal, on the numbers.

Why invest in Portugal?

Portugal recorded the strongest residential price growth in the European Union in 2025, and it is not a one-off spike. It is the continuation of a decade of structural appreciation, driven by a persistent housing shortage, sustained international demand and stable economic fundamentals.

A stable economy underneath a tight housing market.

In 2025, The Economist named Portugal its Economy of the Year, first among 36 advanced economies. GDP grew 1.9%, above the EU average. Unemployment fell to a historic low of 5.8%, the budget ran a surplus, and the sovereign credit rating was upgraded to A+. It is this stable, growing economy that underpins the property market — not sentiment, and not a single good year.

Emerging markets within Lisbon

Lisbon's average new-build price sits at around €8,520 per square metre in 2025 — still 30 to 40% below equivalent space in London or Paris, even as the city's fundamentals keep strengthening. That gap is part of what continues to draw international capital.

The sharpest growth, though, is not in the established prime districts. It is in emerging zones like Beato and Marvila, former industrial neighbourhoods on the eastern riverfront now attracting sustained investment in tech, creative industries and hospitality. Values there appreciated 25% to 32% year on year in 2025 alone, well ahead of the national average.

What it costs, and how a purchase actually runs.

On top of the purchase price, a Portuguese purchase carries the following typical one-off costs. We prepare a personalised, itemised breakdown for your specific property before you commit — no figure in it is a placeholder.

COST ITEM	TYPICAL LEVEL
IMT, property transfer tax	Progressive, up to ~7.5%
Stamp duty	0.8% of price
Notary and land registry	≈ €1,000 to €1,500
Legal fees, conveyancing	≈ 1%, or fixed
Annual property tax (IMI), ongoing	0.3% to 0.45% p.a.

Illustrative. IMT is progressive and depends on price and on whether the property is a primary or secondary home. Non-residents may require fiscal representation.

THE TRANSACTION

How the purchase process works

- 01 Investment brief
We scope your mandate — objective, budget and timeline — and return a shortlist of vetted opportunities that meet it, typically within days.
- 02 Due diligence
Legal standing, ownership and title are verified before any capital moves, so you commit with full visibility on risk.
- 03 Promissory contract, CPCV
Terms are agreed and a deposit secures the asset, usually within two to four weeks of an accepted offer.
- 04 Completion
Final deed and registration follow, typically four to eight weeks later depending on financing. At that point the asset is legally yours.
- 05 Asset management
For owners based abroad, we manage the property on an ongoing basis, protecting the investment from day one.

Timelines are typical, not guaranteed, and depend on financing, the counterparty and the specific asset. Figures current as of July 2026 and subject to change.

Strong headline numbers are not the same as a good individual investment.

The return depends on the asset, the location, the structure and the management. That is where we come in, before, during and after the purchase. We are an independent advisory firm, not tied to any developer, so our recommendations are based on what performs for you.

Define the objective	Yield, capital growth, a base for residency, or a blend. Each points to a different asset and a different location.
Select asset and location	From established prime districts to emerging, high-growth zones such as Beato and Marvila, matched to your objective and risk appetite.
Vet and verify	Legal standing, ownership clarity, condition and realistic net returns, laid out before you commit.
Structure it correctly	Ownership, tax and financing structured around your circumstances, and residency where that is part of the plan.
Manage for the long term	Tenancing, maintenance and reporting handled on your behalf, so ownership from abroad stays genuinely hands-off.
